

CHILDFUND LAOS ANNUAL REPORT 2014-15

ChildFund Laos is the representative office of ChildFund Australia – an independent and non-religious international development organisation that works to reduce poverty for children in the developing world.

ChildFund Australia is a member of the ChildFund Alliance – a global network of 12 organisations which assists more than 15 million children and families in 58 countries.

ChildFund began work in Laos in 2010, implementing community development programs in Xieng Khouang Province, one of the poorest areas in the country. ChildFund has a strong focus on improving access to quality education, and is expanding its work to include pre-primary education to ensure that children get the best possible start in life.

In partnership with communities, ChildFund has established projects to improve water, sanitation and hygiene, mother and child health, food security and nutrition, as well as opportunities for children and youth to participate in local decision-making. ChildFund has a strong focus on protection, child rights and developing life-skills through tools including sport and multimedia. In FY14-15 ChildFund Laos has expanded projects in Xieng Khouang with multi-sector intervention and in Vientiane on safeguarding and also concluded one project on physical and art education, in response to the increasing risks facing children in urban areas.

From the country director

ChildFund's work in Laos has resulted in significant improvements to the lives of more than 30,124 children and their families over the past year.

Keoamphone Souvannaphoum

Another 12 months have passed and ChildFund Laos has entered its 6th year, expanding its geographical coverage. In 2015, we strengthened our focus on integrated development to address the complex factors causing poverty, building on our strengths in education and participation.

As we conclude the year, some highlights include enhancing the capacity of communities to manage their own projects, improving teachers' active classroom methods, and promoting healthy practices leading to positive behavior change in communities. All of these highlights result in improved lives for children.

This year, ChildFund Laos secured a new six-year agreement with the Government of the Lao PDR to work in Nonghet district, Xieng Khouang province. We also concluded our first project in the capital of Vientiane, responding to the increasing risks we see for children in urban areas.

Our programs have reached approximately 30,124 people, of which 40 per cent are children. On our journey,

Youth from Xieng Khouang and Vientiane take part in the Pass It Back program

we have worked towards developing better inclusion strategies for marginalised groups, evident through our increased engagement of girls, women and people with disabilities.

We also launched our first regional sport for development program, Pass It Back, which uses rugby to equip children and young people in a dynamic Asia to overcome challenges, inspire positive social change and 'pass it back' to their communities. By the end of this financial year, 34 coaches from Laos had been trained to deliver rugby and life-skills in their communities.

In 2015, we completed our four-year strategic plan. We are looking forward to reflecting, refining and focusing on our key strengths, in order to support the needs of children and families in our new country strategy.

The achievements of 2014 would not have been possible without the efforts and support of our staff, partners and supporters.

As we move forward, we will ensure that we continue to reach out to more marginalised groups, commit to the development of our staff and strengthen our partnerships with local partners, government and communities to make positive improvements in the lives of children in Laos.

Meeting the healthcare needs of mothers and newborns in rural communities

Lor with her 6-month-old daughter

With the support from the Australian Government and the Give a Little Love Foundation, ChildFund Laos built and opened a new Mother and Child Health Centre (MCH) in July 2014. Serviced by four doctors, two of whom are female, the centre also employs five female nurses. Since opening its doors, the centre averages around eight consultations daily, mostly for antenatal care and family planning.

Lor is one of the first mothers to gave birth at the health centre. This delivery was very special to her since it was her first experience in a hospital environment, attended by medical staff. Previously, Lor had given birth at home, despite the fact that she lives just five kilometres from the hospital, on the main road.

She explains: "I never gave birth at the hospital before. I had my four children at home with my mother-in-law and older women from the village assisting.

"During delivery at home, I just sat on a wooden chair or a bed and after delivery I had a strong backache. At home, there is no specific equipment for delivery; it is very tiring."

When she was pregnant with her fifth child, she wasn't afraid but it had been eight years since delivering her last child. For that reason, Lor decided to have pre and post natal care at the district hospital, so if problems arose, and doctor would be available.

"When I started feeling pain, I went to the hospital. As soon as I arrived, the nurse examined me and encouraged me to wait. Just before the delivery, I felt secure because the doctor was there and made me feel confident everything would go well.

"In the room, there was a special bed and many instruments that made it easier to deliver the baby. I thought the pain was reduced thanks to the delivery bed. At home, delivery is very tiring and it takes weeks to recover," explains Lor.

"One day after delivering my baby at hospital I felt strong already. I am very happy with the service at the hospital, especially the way I was welcomed, cared for and how my delivery was monitored. The doctor kept asking me 'Do you feel pain? How long between each contraction? Is the baby moving as usual?' and he always checked my blood pressure" she added.

The monthly statistics of the hospital confirm the number of patients has increased since the service opened, with local women attracted by the improved services available, including the new building, modern equipment and qualified staff. The average number of births at the hospital is now 15 per month compared to 10 in 2012.

The previously poor quality of facilities, as well as a lack of trust, had prevented many women from giving birth at the district hospital. Stories like Lor's will be shared and hopefully encourage more women to use the health centre.

In the meantime, ChildFund will support the local community in maintaining the quality of care provided, to ensure the future sustainability of this vital health service.

Collaborate to achieve change
